ANNEXURE

COSMIQ Panel Pixel Policy

Panel manufacturers set limits as to how many defective dots (or sub-pixels) are deemed to be acceptable on any Display panel. COSMIQ's manufacturer warranty covers any defects that exceed the defect specifications described in this document. Panel displays are made of tiny pixels. Each pixel is made up of a red, green and blue sub-pixel, and each sub pixel is driven by an individual transistor. If a transistor becomes defective the corresponding dot may be permanently light (bright) or may not light (dark). Independently of the brand and the manufacturer, it is common for one or more sub-pixels to become fixed in an unchanging state. The defective sub-pixel phenomenon is as follows: Color white - a bright/hot sub-pixel (always ON) Color black - a dark/dead sub-pixel (always OFF) Color red, green or blue - a stuck sub-pixel (always ON or always OFF)

Pixel Structure with Illustrations:

Full pixel vs. Sub-pixel

A full pixel consists of one red, green, and blue sub-pixel.

Bright and Dark Sub-pixel A bright sub-pixel is one that is fully lit.

In the following example the blue sub-pixel remains lit even when the surrounding sub-pixels are unlit.

Bright sub-pixel:

Dark sub-pixel - A sub-pixel that is always colored on a white background.

Classification of defects
